Executive Summary

The mission of the Bentley Rare Book Gallery is to acquire, preserve, make accessible and promote the use and appreciation of the rare collection in order to enhance and support the research and teaching mission of Kennesaw State University and to share this rich resource with the citizens of Georgia.

The collection is a reflection of the history and development of the book and the impact the written and printed word has had and continues to have on human progress.

In the year 2007-2008 the rare collection was an integral resource in the academic curriculum and the Bentley Rare Book Gallery regularly served as a classroom. Presentations were given for a wide range of campus classes. Faculty and students appreciate the opportunity to examine first-hand the influential books, newspapers, and artifacts from the eras they study in their academic discipline.

Through its dynamic outreach workshops and exhibitions campus visitors and community members appreciate the rich history represented in the collection and the importance and value of preserving the collection for future generations.

Robert B. Williams
Assistant Vice President for Library Services and Curator of The Bentley Rare Book Collection.

The Bentley Rare Book Gallery
Visitors attending Rare Book Gallery presentations have the opportunity to hold history in their hands. In the 2008 fiscal year 183 instructional classes were held in the gallery attended by 1,955 KSU students and 559 campus visitors.

Faculty and Bentley Rare Book Room staff collaborate in these presentations; selecting rare materials that are relevant to the class curriculum. Students attend from a broad range of academic classes including: English literature, composition and world literature classes, American and European history classes, graduate level writing and education classes, honors classes, mass communication classes, art classes, and senior and freshman seminar classes.

Faculty and students also arrange individual appointments to use materials from the collection for academic research throughout the academic year.

Campus visitors are impressed with the depth and breadth of the collection, its use in the curriculum, and its accessibility to visiting scholars and community members. It is a showcase for the Kennesaw State University academic mission.

Outreach: Dynamic Interaction With The Community

Selections from the rare collection are exhibited every year as part of a dynamic outreach program for the campus and community.

Newspapers and pamphlets printed during the creation and ratification of the Constitution were exhibited on campus during the Constitution Week Celebration activities.

The “Book Arts, Art in Books, Books As Art” exhibition of 226 books and digitized images from the rare collection was attended by 842 campus and community visitors during its 2007 and 2008 shows in the Sturgis Art Gallery. Excellent reviews by the Atlanta Journal Newspaper attracted new visitors to the campus and showcased the academic endeavors of the university.

Rita Impey-Imes and Rita Spisak exhibited selections from the rare collection and presented a workshop entitled “Holding History in Your Hands - Inspiring Reading” at the 2008 Children’s Literature Conference.

Mr. Robert Williams taught the popular 2007 “Great Books” class through the Continuing Education Center. It was well-attended by devoted readers from the local community.

On October 17, 2007 Apollo 16 astronaut, General Charles Duke donated artifacts from his 1972 moon landing to the Bentley Rare Book Collection. In a special ceremony General Duke described his historic moon landing to a fascinated campus audience and then presented his lunar rover map, lunar module checklist, and twenty-four Georgia flags from the Apollo 16 moon mission to the Bentley Rare Book Gallery.

On September 26, 2007 Don Russell Clayton generously donated his personal research collection of Christmas Cards, letters, photographs, lithographs, books, magazines, articles, and memorabilia about Athos and Sara Menaboni and Robert W. Woodruff to the Bentley Rare Book Gallery.

This collection will be an important resource for art scholars studying the work of Athos Menaboni, considered the “second Audubon” for his naturalistic paintings of wildlife.

One of Menaboni’s many notable patrons and friends was Robert W. Woodruff, President of Coca-Cola. Mr. Woodruff commissioned Menaboni to paint his personal Christmas Cards for the years 1941 to 1984. Mr. Clayton shared a friendship with both the Menaboni and Woodruff families. The Robert W. Woodruff Foundation donated a substantial gift to KSU to create the Don Russell Clayton Gallery in honor of this friendship.

The Menaboni Christmas cards from the Don Russell Clayton Collection were loaned by the Bentley Rare Book Gallery for the “Athos Menaboni: Conversations with Nature” exhibit. This exhibit by the KSU College of the Arts opened May 18, 2008 in the Don Russell Clayton Gallery.

Mr. Clayton, was inducted into the Friends of the Arts Golden Circle Lifetime Recognition Honor Society on May 18, 2008 in recognition of his generous donation of Athos Menaboni art to the university.
Collections: Acquisitions, Preservation and Digitization

New Acquisitions
The Bentley Rare Book Gallery is a growing resource. Each year new texts and artifacts are acquired through careful purchase or through gifts from generous donors. In the 2008 fiscal year 351 items were purchased and 1,198 items were donated by the following donors:

Fred Bentley Sr.
Don Russell Clayton
Mark and Mary Harvey
Harding F. Bancroft
Marie Littlejohn

Preservation
Thanks to the efforts of the university's HVAC team and the installation of new sensors and control units there was significant improvement in environmental control in the Bentley Rare Book Gallery. This improvement will help protect the rare collection from mold and mildew and insure its survival for future generations.

Digital Initiatives
A large format digital scanner was purchased for the library in 2007. Images from the rare collection were scanned and mounted for the "Book Art, Art in Books, Books as Art" exhibitions. The remarkable clarity of the reproduced images allowed exhibition visitors to appreciate the many beautiful engravings in the collection and increased the number of items available for display without creating undue stress on the original texts.

Strategic Plan: To Improve Access and Preservation

Outreach:

Creation of a Bentley Rare Book Gallery webpage that will increase the visibility of the collection, contain links to the special collections catalog, include visual samples of the rare materials and exhibits, and provide a schedule of events and services for the campus and community. Expand the program for public exhibitions and create new opportunities to attract potential donors.

Accessibility:

In collaboration with the University Archives create digitized images and metadata records of rare materials using Contentdm software and make these records available through the Bentley Rare Book Gallery website. Create indexes for the rare newspaper collection to improve access for user research.

Preservation:

Assess the condition of rare bindings and using archival materials and methods begin a systematic repair of deteriorated bindings. Upgrade the environmental control systems in the gallery and adjacent rooms to insure optimal preservation conditions for the collection.

Facility Improvements and Expansion:

Renovate the adjacent storage room to expand the shelving area for rare materials. Increase the classroom and presentation space dedicated to the rare collection to better serve the growing university classes and community outreach programs.
