Eames Scholarship Fund Set up at Waycross College

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/glq
Part of the Education Commons, and the Library and Information Science Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/glq/vol45/iss3/8

This News is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@Kennesaw State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Georgia Library Quarterly by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@Kennesaw State University.
Fulton County commissioners authorize bond referendum

On Nov. 4, Fulton County voters will vote on a $275 million bond referendum for the construction, expansion and renovation of public libraries.

If approved, the bonds would provide funding for the Atlanta-Fulton Public Library System’s master plan, which includes eight new libraries, expansion of two facilities and renovation of 23 more.

The bond issue also includes $84 million for the construction of a new Central Library, with the remaining (approximately $85 million) coming from private funds.

The library’s master plan was developed over the course of 24 months and included a series of public input sessions throughout the county. The plan maintains 34 libraries, the current number of libraries in the system, by eliminating leased spaces and its oldest libraries. Fulton County last issued a library bond in 1988.

“I am thrilled that voters will have the opportunity to make this decision affecting the future of our library system,” said Fulton County Commission Chairman John Eaves, who also serves on the Atlanta-Fulton Public Library System’s board of trustees. “Libraries represent an investment in the future of this county, and there has been a great deal of public interest in improvement to our libraries.”

John Szabo, director of the Atlanta-Fulton Public Library System, said, “This is a great day for libraries and for the Fulton County citizens who value what libraries bring to their community. We are grateful for the leadership of the Board of Commissioners in recognizing the importance of public libraries and to the citizens who continue to voice their support and opinions. We are one step closer to having the world-class library system we know Fulton County residents want and deserve.” A summary of the plan is available online at www.afpls.org.

Eames Scholarship Fund set up at Waycross College

An endowed scholarship has been created for Waycross College students through the generosity of a retired local librarian.

Charles B. Eames Jr., former director of the Okefenokee Regional Library System (ORLS), established the Eames Scholarship Fund to honor the memory of his parents and to benefit students majoring in library science, information studies or related fields. Students experiencing financial difficulties are also eligible to benefit from the scholarship.

“I wanted to give back to the Waycross community in a significant way. I felt the creation of this scholarship was appropriate,” said Eames. “I want to be able to help those that are less fortunate than I am. It’s my hope that

Charles B. Eames Jr. of Waycross (right) presents a check for $20,000 to Dr. David Palmer, president of Waycross College, to establish the Eames Scholarship Fund.
University and public libraries receive Connecting to Collections

Dr. Anne-Imelda Radice, director of the Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) in Washington, D.C., has announced that 21 Georgia libraries, museums and archives have been selected to receive the IMLS Connecting to Collections Bookshelf. The contents of the bookshelf were selected by a blue-ribbon panel of conservation experts; it includes an essential set of books, online resources and a user's guide that can profoundly affect the ability of small libraries and museums to care for their collections.

Georgia institutions receiving the bookshelf are Albany State University in Albany; the Robert W. Woodruff Library of the Atlanta University Center in Atlanta; Clark Atlanta University Art Galleries in Atlanta; the Delta Heritage Museum in Atlanta; the Augusta Museum of History; Historic Augusta, Inc.; the Cherokee County Historical Society; Brenau University in Gainesville; the Kennesaw State University Library's Bentley Rare Book Room in Kennesaw; the Cherokee Regional Library System in LaFayette; the Lee County Library in Leesburg; the Middle Georgia Archives, which is located in the Macon-Bibb County Library and is part of the Middle Georgia Regional Library System; the Tubman African American Museum in Macon; the Pioneer Arts and Historical Society in McRae; the Midway Museum, the Historic Dorchester Academy/Museum of African American History and Seabrook Village, all in Midway; the McDaniel-Tichenor House in Monroe; Jack Hadley Black History Memorabilia in Thomasville; the Odum Library at Valdosta State University; and the Ohoopee Regional Library System in Vidalia.

“The Connecting to Collections Bookshelf provides museums, libraries and archives essential instructions on how to rescue treasures of yesteryear that they hold in trust,” said Radice. “These bookshelves, once they are all distributed, will touch institutions around the nation.”

The IMLS Bookshelf was made possible by a cooperative agreement with the American Association for State and Local History (AASLH) with support from the Getty Foundation, the Henry Luce Foundation and the Samuel H. Kress Foundation. It is part of Connecting to Collections: A Call to Action, a strategic initiative by IMLS to address the challenges described in A Public Trust at Risk: The Heritage Health Index Report on the State of America’s Collections.

The report concluded that:

■ 190 million objects need conservation treatment,