The African Social Science Review (ISSN 1521-6667) is a biannual publication of the Center for International and Area Studies in collaboration with the Office of Research and Development at Prairie View A&M University. This publication seeks articles from all disciplines of social science. The Review particularly welcomes manuscripts on the social, economic, political, and policy problems and issues of the African continent and the diaspora as well as empirical and theoretical articles. Book reviewers are requested to submit articles on recent publications in related topics. Only papers not currently under review or previously published elsewhere can be considered. All submissions are blind referred. Clarity and directness of presentation are required.

Manuscripts must be typed and doubled-spaced following the American Psychological Association (APA) guidelines (4th edition) or the Style Manual for Political Science. Four copies should be submitted, three of which have all references that could identify the author or authors removed. Authors are advised to keep copies for their own record since it will not be possible for us to return the manuscripts. We need an abstract of no more than 150 words. The length of the paper should not exceed 25 double-spaced typewritten pages, including notes, references, tables, figures or graphs and appendices; all must be presented on separate pages, with instructions suggesting the placement in the text. Notes and references should appear at the end of the article. A separate cover sheet showing the title of the paper, the name, affiliation, position and address of the author should accompany each submission. To enhance blind review, the body of the text should include the title, but not the author’s name. The views expressed in published articles are those of the authors and not necessarily those of the editors or editorial board.

Subscriptions for institutions is $70.00 annually and $30.00 for individuals.

MISSION STATEMENT

Prairie View A&M University is a state-supported institution with a student body that, although changing, is still primarily local and culturally homogeneous. Internationalizing the life of the University in general and the course curriculum particularly became necessary in order to inspire locally-oriented students to see themselves as part of a culturally diverse world, and ever closely an intermeshed "global village," thus necessitating the establishment of the Center for International Area Studies (CIAS). In essence, the Center's launching in 1998 was in response to new trends affecting the nature and operations of American higher education forcing universities and colleges to sharpen their competitive edge in a fast changing global environment. The founding of the Center also can be traced to the realization that the demands of globalization have to be met and that the concerns of both the University and the larger society that it serves in an internationally oriented educational milieu are beginning to converge more than ever.

The Center draws upon the strengths of the rich and diverse background of the faculty and the knowledge and expertise such a faculty enjoys in the language, culture, history and politics of the several regions of the world. The Center assumes its overriding edict to be the promotion of international studies and global understanding through goals and objectives that are complementary to the purpose and mission of the University.

GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

- Offer new avenues for coordinating the international student and faculty exchange programs on campus more effectively;
- Increase the chances of centralizing institutionally sanctioned international communications with agencies and authorities overseas;
- Serve as a sort of clearinghouse for research, publications and symposia that pertain to global concerns;
- Help promote and coordinate international festivals and other related activities on campus in order to expose our locally-oriented students to the cultures and traditions of other nations;
- Take on the responsibility of curriculum development, language training, study abroad initiatives and recruitment of international students;
- Serve as a contact designate of the University handling inquiries from international agencies, authorities and others concerning matters such as guest appearances, visitations, as well as invitations to international functions, workshops, cultural festivals, and the like;
- Publish the biannual journal, African Social Science Review; and
- Assist departments in the preparation for submission of grant proposals to funding agencies.
