Furman University held a groundbreaking ceremony for the $25 million expansion and renovation of its James B. Duke Library on May 16. The $25 million project will include a complete renovation of the original building and an endowment for the new square footage. The primary gift comes from The Duke Endowment of Charlotte, N.C., which has made a $9.5 million commitment to the library. The 48,000-square-foot addition, which will be known as the Charlie Peace Wing, will provide collaborative study rooms, reading and research areas, and space for the library's growing collection. The addition, made possible by a gift from Ms. Sterling, is named in honor of her late father, a longtime executive with The Greenville News-Piedmont Co. The original building will also be renovated. The main floor will be redesigned to accommodate more public services, information technology, and study space. The ground level will feature a multimedia computing commons, the Help Desk, and computer labs.

Jackson Library at UNC Greensboro recently became the newest member of the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries (ASERL). "Admission to ASERL is a recognition of Jackson Library's growing stature in the academic library community," said University Librarian Doris Hulbert. "We continue to develop our print and electronic resources to meet the needs of a research institution." Jackson Library's collections total more than 2.7 million books, federal and state documents, microforms and other formats. The one-millionth print volume was acquired in 2001. Of special value to researchers are the University archives and special collections, which include over 4 million additional items.
