

April 2007

REVIEW: The Yumion Series

Sandy Hester

Fitzgerald-Ben Hill County Library

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/glq>

 Part of the Library and Information Science Commons

Recommended Citation

Hester, Sandy (2007) "REVIEW: The Yumion Series," Georgia Library Quarterly: Vol. 44 : Iss. 1 , Article 35.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/glq/vol44/iss1/35>

This Review is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@Kennesaw State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Georgia Library Quarterly by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@Kennesaw State University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@kennesaw.edu.

Warm Springs by David M. Burke, Jr. and Odie A. Burke (Arcadia Publishing, 2005; ISBN 0-7385-4199-0, $19.99). This pictorial work featuring Warm Springs, Georgia, located in the west central part of the state, features over 200 photographs. The work begins with an explanation of the geology of the area that causes the warm springs to exist. There is some discussion of the early history of the locale from the 1800s through the early 1920s when the area was primarily a vacation spot for the well-to-do. The majority of the book, however, emphasizes the years from 1924 to 1945 when Franklin Delano Roosevelt was active in Warm Springs. It touches upon the ostracism suffered by polio victims—who were not allowed to ride in passenger cars on trains and feared to be contagious when bathing in a shared pool—and the great changes that Roosevelt affected for them. He caused Warm Springs to become a haven for those suffering from polio and other paralyzes, spending two-thirds of his fortune to purchase property and buildings in the area. He hired physical therapists and had constructed pools, living quarters, a hydrotherapy center, and more. Roosevelt incorporated the March of Dimes that eventually funded the vaccine for polio. Many photographs show Roosevelt in relaxed settings, among polio victims, children, and ordinary townspeople. The narrative submits that it was during his stay in Warm Springs that Roosevelt came to understand the plight of the rural poor. Due to that understanding, he implemented the Rural Electrification Administration, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and the Civilian Conservation Corps, all of which helped bring the country out of the Great Depression. This volume belongs in any library with a focus on Georgia, social history, political science, and/or Franklin Delano Roosevelt. »»

— Reviewed by Mary-Frances Panettiere
Georgia Institute of Technology

JUVENILE LITERATURE

Yumion series by Rhonda Frost Petty, illustrated by Pam Alexander (Be Sweet Publications: The Onion Ambassador, 2001; ISBN: 0-9709105-0-9, $16.00; Yumion Goes to the City, 2002; ISBN: 0-9709105-1-7, $16.00; Yumion's Mountain Holidays, 2004; ISBN: 0-9709105-2-5, $16.00; Sails, Pails, and Alligator Tales, 2005; ISBN: 0-9709105-6-8, $16.00).

Vidalia, Georgia, was made famous years ago for its unique variety of onion. Now the city is entering the spotlight again as the birthplace of another onion variety—the walking, talking kind. Meet Georgia's newest ambassador, Yumion, the lovable adventurer whose mission above all is to remind everyone to "Be Sweet." In this four-volume series, Yumion, the Onion Ambassador, travels all over Georgia learning about all that this great state has to offer. Yumion's travels take him from the fields of Vidalia to the state capital in Atlanta. From there he ventures to the Mountains and then out to the coast, ending up in the great Okefenokee Swamp. Readers of this series will not only learn about Georgia's great sites, but also learn a bit about some famous personalities, such as President Jimmy Carter and Zell Miller. The rhyming text and engaging illustrations make this series an excellent choice for reading aloud to any audience, young or old. Pam Alexander and Rhonda Frost Petty have compiled an excellent series of tales that will be useful to students, teachers, librarians, and even tourism committees throughout the state of Georgia. After reading these adventures, one wonders, where will Yumion go next? »»

— Reviewed by Sandy Hester
Fitzgerald-Ben Hill County Library

My Own Private Library

Continued from page 4

Coast Guard tugboat regulations, and books by and about sailors from Richard Henry Dana and Captain Bligh to Linda Greenlaw. One entire wall of them on old hatch boards from a freighter. Of course, it does jazz up the place — the last thing sitting on those hatch boards (before his books) was a Mercedes!

Of my entire life of book collecting, I am having the most fun now. I have started a collection for our granddaughter — she has her own bookcase, and I am getting all those books that a librarian-grandparent loves to read to children and loves children to read. So far I haven't invoked the library rule. I hope that 50 years from now the books will remind her of her grandmother, as my father's books remind me of his love for me and for reading. »»

Dusty Gres is director of the Ohoopee Regional Library System in Vidalia.