

March 2015

About the Contributors

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/jgi>

Part of the Asian Studies Commons, International Relations Commons, and the Peace and Conflict Studies Commons

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 License.

Recommended Citation

(2015) "About the Contributors," Journal of Global Initiatives: Policy, Pedagogy, Perspective: Vol. 9 : No. 1 , Article 9.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/jgi/vol9/iss1/9>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@Kennesaw State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of Global Initiatives: Policy, Pedagogy, Perspective by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@Kennesaw State University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@kennesaw.edu.

About the Contributors

Millie Creighton is a Japan specialist in the Department of Anthropology at the University of British Columbia where she was one of the founders of the Centre for Japanese Research. She has published extensively on topics including consumerism, work, leisure, gender, minorities, civil society, Japan's constitution, Article 9, tourism, advertising and art.

Thomas Feldhoff is an adjunct professor in the Department of Human Geography and managing director of the Interdisciplinary Centre for East Asian Studies at Goethe University Frankfurt, Germany. His academic background is in human geography and East Asian studies with a focus on Japan. His current research focuses on the political economy of energy and food security, the influences of policy frameworks and institutional structures.

Stefano Mazzotta is Associate Professor of Economics & Finance at Kennesaw State University. He earned his Ph.D. with a specialization in Finance from McGill University in 2005. His research interests are in international finance, volatility and risk management, and applied Econometrics. Prior to starting his academic career, Dr. Mazzotta worked for several years as a financial journalist and business consultant in Japan.

Dan Paracka is Professor of Education in the Interdisciplinary Studies Department at Kennesaw State University, where he also coordinates the signature Annual Country Study Program. His areas of scholarship center on processes of global learning and intercultural competency. Among his recent publications is "China's Three Teachings and the Relationship of Heaven, Earth and Humanity," in Worldviews: Global Religions, Culture, and Ecology.

Tom Pynn is Senior Lecturer in Interdisciplinary Studies, coordinator of the Peace Studies Program and interim coordinator of the Religious Studies Program at Kennesaw State University. His interests in Asian Studies include Daoism, Buddhist ontology and ethics, Yoga philosophy and practice, and Asian cinema. Recently, his research interests have been in Daoism and Asian philosophical and religious contributions to Peace Studies as well as Beat Culture appropriations of Buddhism.

Masako Racel is Assistant Professor of History in the Department of History and Philosophy at Kennesaw State University. Trained as a world historian, her research interest centers upon cross-cultural interactions between Japanese and foreign societies, especially, but not limited to, the Meiji era.

William M. Tsutsui is president and professor of history at Hendrix College in Conway, Arkansas. A specialist in the economic, cultural, and environmental history of modern Japan, he is the author or editor of eight books, including Banking Policy in Japan, Manufacturing Ideology: Scientific Management in Twentieth-Century Japan, and Japanese Popular Culture and Globalization.

Stephen Turnbull took his first degree at Cambridge and has Masters of Arts in Theology and Military History. In 1996 he received a PhD for his work on Japan's Kakure Kirishitan. He is Emeritus Professor of Japanese Studies at Akita International University, Research Associate at SOAS and an Honorary Lecturer at Leeds University. He has published 72 books.

Andrew K. Whitehead is Assistant Professor of Philosophy in the Department of History and Philosophy at Kennesaw State University. He specializes in East-West comparative philosophy, with a focus on the Chinese, Japanese, and European Continental traditions.