Sarabande, Giga, and Badinerie  I  Arcangelo Corelli

The Italian composer and violinist Arcangelo Corelli exercised a wide influence on his contemporaries and on the succeeding generation of composers. Born in Fusignano, Italy in 1653, a full generation before Bach or Handel, he studied in Bologna, a distinguished musical center, then established himself in Rome in the 1670s. By 1679 had entered the service of Queen Christina of Sweden, who had taken up residence in Rome in 1655, after her abdication the year before, and had established there an academy of literati that later became the Arcadian Academy. Thanks to his musical achievements and growing international reputation he found no trouble in obtaining the support of a succession of influential patrons. History has remembered him with such titles as "Founder of Modern Violin Technique," the "World's First Great Violinist," and the "Father of the Concerto Grosso."

His contributions can be divided three ways; as violinist, composer and teacher. It was his skill on the new instrument known as the violin and his extensive and very popular concert tours throughout Europe which did most to give that instrument its prominent place in music. It is probably correct to say that Corelli's popularity as a violinist was as great in his time as was Paganini's during the 19th century. Yet Corelli was not a virtuoso in the contemporary sense, for a beautiful singing tone alone distinguished great violinists in that day, and Corelli's tone quality was the most remarkable in all Europe according to reports. In addition, Corelli was the first person to organize the basic elements of violin technique.

Corelli's popularity as a violinist was equaled by his acclaim as a composer. His music was performed and honored throughout all Europe; in fact, his was the most popular instrumental music. It is important to note in this regard that a visit of respect to the great Corelli was an important part of the Italian tour of the young Handel. Yet Corelli's compositional output was rather small. All of his creations are included in six opus numbers, most of them being devoted to serious and popular sonatas and trio sonatas. In the Sonatas Opus 5 is found the famous "La Folia" Variations for violin and accompaniment. One of Corelli's famous students, Geminiani, thought so much of the Opus 5 Sonatas that he arranged all the works in that group as Concerti Grossi. However, it is in his own Concerti Grossi, Opus 6 that Corelli reached his creative peak and climaxed all his musical contributions.

Oblivion  |  Astor Piazzolla

Ástor Piazzolla, king of the Nuevo tango, was born in Mar del Plata, Argentina. He grew up in New York where he mastered the bandoneón and became acquainted with legendary tango singer-composer Carlos Gardel. Upon returning to Buenos Aires in 1937, he gave concerts and made tango arrangements for Aníbal Troilo, later forming Orquesta del 46 to showcase his own compositions. Piazzolla claimed to have studied with three great teachers: Alberto Ginastera, Nadia Boulanger, and the city of Buenos Aires. Boulanger may have persuaded Piazzolla to pursue his interest in the tango, but Buenos Aires taught him its secrets, which he discovered “in a cold room in a boarding house, in the cabarets in the 1940s, in the cafés with balconies and orchestras, in the people of yesterday and today, in the sound of the streets.”
In the mid-1950s Piazzolla set about to revolutionize the tango, a move that initially met with resistance among traditionalists in Argentina. He formed his Octeto Buenos Aires in 1955 specifically to experiment with new rhythms, new harmonies, melodies, timbres, and forms, ultimately creating tango nuevo, which represented a fusion of traditional tango, classical music, and jazz. He soon found acceptance for tango nuevo outside Argentina, particularly in France and the United States, and by the 1980s even the Argentinians were hailing him as the saviour of the tango.

Piazzolla composed Oblivion in 1982 for Mario Bellocchio’s film Enrico IV (1984), adapted from a play by Luigi Pirandello. The protagonist is an actor-historian who suffers a fall during an historical pageant. Upon regaining consciousness he assumes the identity of the character that he was playing, Henry IV, Holy Roman Emperor. Piazzolla’s nostalgic tune unfolds in a slow milonga, a song genre of Uruguay and Argentina that was a forerunner of the tango.

La muerte del ángel (1962) belongs to the incidental music composed for Alberto Rodíguez Muñoz’s play El tango del ángel about an angel who heals the spirits of the unfortunate in Buenos Aires only to be killed in a knife fight. This tango is part of a series of “ángel” compositions from the late 1950s and early 1960s. It falls into three sections, beginning with an aggressive fugue. Piazzolla attributed his contrapuntal facility to his studies with Nadia Boulanger. In the slow middle section, the cello introduces an expressive, lyrical theme that is passed to the rest of the trio. When the fugue theme returns, it is doubled fortissimo by violin and cello over chordal piano accompaniment.

Oblivion and La muerte del ángel were arranged for piano trio by José Bra-gato (b. 1915), the cellist in several of Piazzolla’s ensembles, including Octeto Buenos Aires.

The prolific Camille Saint-Saëns might well be considered the Professor Emeritus of French music. Over the span of eight and a half decades, he composed over three hundred works in a huge range of genres, performed in hundreds of concerts as pianist and organist, taught countless pupils, championed new composers, helped revive the works of Bach and Handel (composers he adored), and was known in every corner of the music world. Berlioz, a close friend, quipped famously, Il sait tout, mais il manque d'inexpérience (“He knows everything, but lacks inexperience”).

Of his hundreds of compositions, his orchestral works, his masterpiece opera Samson and Delilah, and his concerti are the most popular. His beloved Symphony No. 3 ("Organ") may have been his favorite child, but his bete noire quickly became The Carnival of the Animals. That this was his best-known work gave Saint-Saëns no end of disgruntlement. Composed in a few days during a trip to South America, he actually banned its public performance for many years (save for the lovely “Swan” movement) knowing instinctively that this humorous piece of musical fluff, created as a gag to please his inner-circle of friends, would become his albatross.

Saint-Saëns was not displeased, however, over the popularity of his opera Samson and Delilah (1877). Just as the opera has been in the opera hall, equally cherished in the concert hall is its Bacchanale from Act III. A scene of wanton jubilance, the Philistines are celebrating the fallen hero in the Temple of Dagon, Samson’s shorn hair laid at the altar. And just as Saint-Saëns said that music falls from his pen like apples, the memorable, exotic sounding themes in this dance are prolific. The final dance is breathtakingly powerful.

Flourish for Wind Band (1939) | Ralph Vaughan Williams
This Flourish is not to be confused with three others in Vaughan Williams’ output: Flourish, for chorus and orchestra (also known as Flourish for a Coronation, 1937), Flourish for Three Trumpets (1951) and Flourish for Glorious John (1957). This is the only one for wind band and is a rather obscure composition, not usually listed in musical reference works and even in books on the composer’s music. Lasting about a minute-and-a-half, Flourish for Wind Band was intended as an overture for a pageant and in the decade following its premiere was lost. In 1971 the score surfaced and was finally published. Moreover, it attracted the attention of composer/arranger Roy Douglas, who fashioned versions of the piece for orchestra and a different one for wind band.

The original by Vaughan Williams opens with a lively fanfare based on a four-note motive. Marked Maestoso, the music blazes in gaudy, brassy colors but then settles down midway through with the introduction of a serene, stately melody related to the opening motif and reminiscent of the alternate theme in the first movement of the composer’s Symphony No. 5, a composition he was then working on. In the end, this cannot be considered a major rediscovery, but neither can the piece be judged a failure. It is a delicious morsel, thematically and instrumentally recognizable in an instant as the work of Vaughan Williams.

Arabesque (2008) | Samuel Hazo
Arabesque was commissioned by the Indiana Bandmasters Association and written for the 2008 Indiana All-State Band. Arabesque is based on the mystical sounds of Middle Eastern music and it is composed in three parts, “taqasim” (tah'-zeem), “dabka” (dupp-keh), and “chorale.” The opening flute cadenza, although written out in notes, is meant to sound like an Arabic taqasim or improvisation. Much the same as in jazz improvisation, the soloist is to play freely in the scales and modes of the genre. In this case, the flute plays in bi-tonal harmonic minor scales, and even bends one note to capture the microtonality (quarter-tones) of the music from this part of the world. However, opposite to jazz, taqasim has very little change to the chordal or bass line accompaniment. It is almost always at the entrance to a piece of music and is meant to set the musical and emotional tone. The second section, a dabka, is a traditional Arabic line dance performed at celebrations, most often at weddings. It’s drumbeat, played by a dumbek or durbake hand drum, is unmistakable. Even though rhythmically simple, it is infectious in its ability to capture the toe-tapping attention of the listener. The final section, the chorale, is a recapitulation of previous mystical themes in the composition, interwoven with grandeur of a sparkling ending.

Both sets of my grandparents immigrated to the United States; my mother’s parents were Lebanese, my father’s mother was Lebanese and his father was Assyrian. Sometimes in composition, the song comes from the heart, sometimes from the mind, and sometimes (as in this case) it’s in your blood. The Indiana Bandmasters Association asked for a piece that was unique. I had not heard any full-out Arabic pieces for wind orchestra, and I knew of this culture’s deep and rich musical properties... so I figured that one might as well come from me. (Plus, my mom asked if I was ever going to write one.) I hope you enjoy Arabesque.

Elegy for a Young American (1964)  |  Ronald Lo Presti          Duration: 7:00

Ronald Lo Presti, clarinetist and composer, was born in 1933 in Williamstown, Massachusetts. After graduating from the Eastman School of Music he received many grants from the Ford Foundation and has also served as the Composer-in-Residence for the Ford Foundation. Lo Presti has taught at Texas Technical University, Indiana State College, and Arizona State University. His most popular work is Elegy for a Young American, but he has also composed A Festive Music; Introduction, Chorale, and Jubilee; Pagaent Overture; Suite for Winds; Tribute; and Tundra.

Elegy For a Young American was written in 1964 and is dedicated to the memory of President John F. Kennedy. The many stages of mourning can be felt as the work unfolds. A quiet adagio sets a tone of respect and solemnity in the beginning. Feelings of shock and denial are reflected by the dynamics and octave jumps in the melody. Anger and remorse express themselves, but they are replaced with a resolution of the loss and an allegro celebration of the contributions of this great American. The maestoso closing reminds us again of our loss.

Fortress (1988)  |  Frank Ticheli
Duration: 6:00

Fortress was composed in 1988 and received its premiere performance by the Batawagama Youth Camp Band in Iron County, Michigan, Donald Schleicher, conductor, on June 25, 1988. In the work, the tritone is the most important harmonic interval throughout. Alteration between major triads a tritone apart occurs throughout the piece. Additionally, there are three important motives that recur throughout the work, each receiving emphasis at different times. The main idea, a dotted eighth note followed by a sixteenth note rhythm, returns often and is passed around to differing sections. The call motif, a triplet figure followed by a half note, utilizes the tritone at the end of the figure. And the legato theme, which combines slurred patterns and a wide contrasting dynamic shape, occurring over a four-measure phrase.

Ryan Gregory, violin

Ryan Gregory's musical craft, through deep engagement with a musical world of wide scope, is informed by rich collaborative experiences and perspectives. Inspired by the eclecticism of the independent music scene in Atlanta, he has performed and recorded with such acts as Little Tybee, Book Club, Spirits and the Melchizedek Children, and Book of Colors, and with Creative Loafings’ ‘Improvisor of the Year,’ Eric Fontaine. He has also collaborated with the contemporary dance ensemble, GloATL.
An alumnus of the Atlanta Symphony Youth Orchestra, one of Ryan’s formative experiences was performing Shostakovich’s Fifth Symphony side-by-side with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Robert Spano. Ryan also participated in a chamber music masterclass with Robert Spano. In 2014, Ryan received a scholarship to attend the Miami Summer Music Festival in its inaugural year where he played under the baton of Grzegorz Nowak, Principal Associate Conductor of the Royal Philharmonic. He has played in the Georgia Symphony Orchestra and the South Florida Symphony. Recent performances as concertmaster have included Mahler’s Das Lied von der Erde and Mason Bates’ Alternative Energy.

He has twice been a finalist in Kennesaw State University’s Concerto Competition. Upcoming performances as a featured soloist include a recital performance with soprano Jana Young and Astor Piazzolla’s Oblivion with the Kennesaw State University Philharmonic.

His primary teachers have been Juan Ramirez, Oliver Steiner and Helen Kim. His coaches and mentors also include Kenn Wagner, Catherine Lynn, Allyson Fleck and Michael Alexander.

The connection he shares with others through teaching is of paramount importance to Ryan. He has led small classes of children in violin, piano, guitar and percussion; conducted sing-a-longs with infants and their caretakers; instructed elementary school students in ear-training and rhythm skills; and performed chamber music for orchestra classes in Cobb County Schools. He currently teaches foundations of violin technique privately and coaches string quartets under the auspices of the Georgia Youth Symphony Orchestra.

Ryan is also a member of the Klimt Duo, along with harpist, Tyler Hartley.
