The Solitary Dancer  |  Warren Benson

Warren Benson, as composer, conductor and performer, was perhaps best known for his music for wind ensemble and percussion and for his song cycles. Benson wrote over 150 works. His music has been played and recorded worldwide by the Kronos Quartet, New York Choral Society, International Horn Society and United States Marine Band. Benson’s teaching career spanned over 50 years and culminated with honors including the Kilbourn Professorship for Distinguished Teaching, and appointment as University Mentor and Professor Emeritus at the Eastman School of Music.

Benson played timpani in the Detroit Symphony Orchestra under Ormandy, Reiner, Goosens, and Bernstein while an undergraduate at the University of Michigan. He later received Fulbright Teaching Fellowships, a John Simon Guggenheim Composer Fellowship, National Endowment for the Arts composer commissions and the Diploma de Honor from the Republic of Argentina. He also held residencies at the McDowell Colony. He was elected to the National Band Association Academy of Excellence and the Percussive Arts Society Hall of Fame, and was a founding member of the World Association for Symphonic Bands and Ensembles.

From 1950-1952, Benson was awarded two successive Fulbright grants to teach at Anatolia College in Salonika, Greece. Benson was Professor of Percussion and Composition for fourteen years at Ithaca College. From 1967-93, he was Professor of Composition at the Eastman School of Music. He also served as Distinguished Meadows Visiting Professor at Southern Methodist University from 1986-88.

Benson was largely self-taught in composition, found great inspiration in jazz and poetry, and was highly influenced by nature, languages, literature, and travel. His archive is located at the Eastman School of Music and his biobibliography by Alan D. Wagner is published by Edwin Mellen Press.

The Solitary Dancer sought quiet excitement and Warren Benson fulfilled this goal with translucent orchestration and the constant manipulation of color, minimal melodic materials, and subtle dynamic nuances. Challenges in this piece are not necessarily technical; rather, performers are required to demonstrate control and restraint while maintaining sonorities for extended periods of time. Individual exposure is frequent, and mature players are best suited to this unconventional work.
Soprano Sax Concerto with Wind Ensemble  I  David Kirkland Garner

David Kirkland Garner’s compositions exist on a continuum of loose inspiration and direct quotation, drawing on pre-existing material from a wide range of sources to create engaging and expressive music. He has written music for a variety of ensembles and occasions including chamber, orchestral, electroacoustic, and vocal works. Most often, Garner draws on the music of the American South as inspiration, focusing on performance, specifically style, technique, tuning, and timbre, rather than the tunes themselves. He has worked with world-renowned ensembles including the Kronos Quartet, which commissioned and premiered my work influenced by the Scottish diaspora titled Lament for the imagined in Glasgow, Scotland. Awards include a Charles Ives Scholarship from the Academy of Arts and Letters in 2014, first prizes in the OSSIA, RED NOTE and NACUSA competitions, and an ASCAP Young Composer Award in 2009. Garner’s music has been performed by groups such as the Ciompi Quartet, Vega Quartet, Locrian Chamber Players, San Diego Symphony, Wet Ink Ensemble, Boston New Music Initiative, yMusic and Eastman’s OSSIA new music ensemble. With degrees from Rice University and the University of Michigan, David most recently completed a PhD at Duke University. He lives in Durham, NC, with his wife Bronwen, his son Rhys and his dog Niko.

The composer writes:

"As in many of my compositions, the 'Soprano Sax Concerto' draws on traditional music as a starting point for a tapestry of quotation and experimentation. The musical building blocks for this concerto are taken from bagpipe traditions from around the world: Irish Uilleann piping, Scottish Highland piping and a curious form of bagpiping from Rajasthan, India. During the British occupation of India, the instrument of the British army, the Scottish Great Highland Bagpipes, was spread across the country and eventually was absorbed into traditional Rajasthani music, essentially performing traditional songs and dances on the Scottish instrument! In addition to these fundamental influences, references to other musical genres, styles, and traditions also pop up throughout the piece."

The first movement revolves around an Irish Uilleann pipe performance of a jig titled, Condon’s Frolics. The movement starts and ends with material that obliquely references the tune by passing the melody around the ensemble. After the opening, a clear version of the tune emerges and repeats while the ensemble builds around the soloist, eventually overshadowing the sax. In the second movement the soloist performs a slowly unfolding languid melody that nods to traditional music from Rajasthan. The final movement draws on a Scottish Piobaireachd (pronounced PEE-brock) titled Patrick Og MacCrimmon’s Lament as the musical material. The tune is heard throughout the movement in various forms sometimes clear and often transformed, with the most “bagpipe-like” version heard in the slower middle section of the movement. In the final minutes of the concerto the tune is pushed into new territory and, after a cadenza interruption, ends joyously.

Prelude in E-flat minor, opus 34, No. 14
Dmitri Shostakovich

Dmitri Dmitriyevich Shostakovich was a Russian composer who lived under the Soviet regime. Shostakovich had a complex and difficult relationship with the Soviet government, suffering two official denunciations of his music in 1936 and 1948, and the periodic banning of his work. Shostakovich's response to official criticism and, more importantly, the question of whether he used music as a kind of abstract dissidence is a matter of dispute. It is clear that outwardly he conformed to government policies and positions, reading speeches and putting his name to articles expressing the government line. It is also generally agreed that he disliked the regime, a view confirmed by his family and his letters to Isaak Glikman.

Shostakovich prided himself on his orchestration, which is clear, economical, and well-projected. This aspect of Shostakovich's technique owes more to Gustav Mahler than Rimsky-Korsakov. His unique approach to tonality involved the use of modal scales and some astringent neo-classical harmonies à la Hindemith and Prokofiev. His music frequently includes sharp contrasts and elements of the grotesque.

His most popular works are his 15 symphonies and 15 string quartets. His works for piano include 2 piano sonatas, an early set of preludes, and a later set of 24 preludes and fugues. Other works include two operas, six concertos, and a substantial quantity of film music.

The Twenty-Four Preludes for Piano were composed in 1932-33, and the Prelude in E-flat minor, Opus 34, No. 14 was one of this set. Opening with a calm but strong chordal statement, the piece continues to build in a single direction to a grand climax of fff dynamics, after which it quickly returns to the quiet mood and material of the beginning. While only 36 measures long, one senses a much more expansive and lengthy composition than its first few short measures reveal.
Bliss | Michael Torke

Michael Torke in an American composer who writes music influenced by jazz and minimalism. With his two best-known early pieces, Ecstatic Orange and Yellow Pages, written in 1985 while still a composition student at Yale, Michael Torke practically defined post-Minimalism, a music which utilizes the repetitive structures of a previous generation to incorporate musical techniques from both the classical tradition and the contemporary pop world. At 23, Torke cut short his graduate study to begin his professional career in New York City, where he was soon signed by Boosey and Hawkes (the publisher of Stravinsky and Copland), became an exclusive recording artist with Argo/Decca Records, and began his five-year collaboration with Peter Martins and the New York City Ballet.

Highlights since then include: Color Music (1985–89), a series of orchestral pieces that each explore a single, specific color; Javelin, recorded both for Argo and for John William’s Summon the Heroes, the official 1996 Olympics album; Four Seasons, a 65-minute oratorio commissioned by the Walt Disney Company to celebrate the millennium and premiered by Kurt Masur and the New York Philharmonic; Strawberry Fields, whose “Great Performances” broadcast was nominated for an Emmy Award; and two evening-length story ballets, The Contract, and An Italian Straw Hat, for James Kudelka and the National Ballet of Canada.

In 1998, Torke was appointed Associate Composer of the Royal Scottish National Orchestra. Naxos released an album including Rapture, his percussion concerto, and An American Abroad, a tone poem, both of which were commissioned and performed by the RSNO. In 2003, Torke founded Ecstatic Records and acquired the rights to re-issue the Decca/Argo catalog of his works. The boxed set of the complete recordings was selected by The New York Times as one of the top Classical albums of the year. Two new releases occurred in 2005: Strawberry Fields, and An Italian Straw Hat.

The composer writes:

"Originally written in 2003, "Bliss" has been extensively revised for wind ensemble in 2013. The 2003 composition was a simple rhythm (4 eighth notes, rest, 1 eighth note, rest, 2 eighth notes, rest) is the underpinning that we hear throughout. What changes is the melodies assigned to these rhythmic values, and the harmonies that support them. With percussionists tapping out the rhythm, the accumulation becomes an ever increasing celebration; a state of ‘Bliss’."
John Philip Sousa was 3rd of 10 children of John Antonio Sousa (born in Spain of Portuguese parents) and Maria Elisabeth Trinkhaus (born in Bavaria). John Philip's father, Antonio, played trombone in the U.S. Marine Band. He grew up around military band music. Sousa started his music education, playing the violin, as a pupil of John Esputa and G. F. Benkert for harmony and musical composition at the age of six. He was found to have absolute pitch. When Sousa reached the age of 13, his father, a trombonist in the Marine Band, enlisted his son in the United States Marine Corps as an apprentice. Sousa served his apprenticeship for seven years until 1875, and apparently learned to play all the wind instruments while also continuing with the violin.

Several years later, Sousa left his apprenticeship to join a theatrical (pit) orchestra where he learned to conduct. He returned to the U.S. Marine Band as its head in 1880, and remained as its conductor until 1892. He organized his own band the year he left the Marine Band. The Sousa Band toured 1892-1931, performing 15,623 concerts. In 1900, his band represented the United States at the Paris Exposition before touring Europe. In Paris, the Sousa Band marched through the streets including the Champs-Élysées to the Arc de Triomphe – one of only eight parades the band marched in over its forty years.

Sousa wrote 136 marches. Sousa also wrote school songs for several American Universities, including Kansas State University, Marquette University, the University of Michigan, and the University of Minnesota. Sousa died at the age of 77 on March 6th, 1932 after conducting a rehearsal of the Ringgold Band in Reading, Pennsylvania. The last piece he conducted was The Stars and Stripes Forever.

The Washington Post was written in 1889 to help promote an essay contest sponsored by the newspaper of the same name. With Sousa conducting, it was premiered by the U.S. Marine Band during the distribution of the essay prizes on the Smithsonian Museum grounds in Washington, D.C. The 6/8 march happened to be appropriate for a new dance called the two-step and soon became the most popular tune in both America and Europe. Although he received only $25 for its publication, Sousa was quickly inundated with requests for more marches. Of his 136 marches, The Washington Post and The Stars and Stripes Forever have been the most widely known.

President, Kennesaw State University | Guest Conductor

Daniel S. Papp is President of Kennesaw State University (KSU), the third largest university in Georgia, with approximately 32,000 students, and 2500 faculty and staff members, which makes it one of the 50 largest public institutions in the nation.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Dartmouth College (1969), Dr. Papp received his Ph.D. from the University of Miami in International Affairs (1973). Since becoming president of KSU in 2006, Dr. Papp has led the creation of a new KSU strategic plan; implemented a new university governance structure; overseen KSU’s re-accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools; initiated the university’s first five doctoral program; increased the number of bachelor and master degrees that it offers; launched the university’s first Comprehensive Campaign, a $75 million effort that reached its target after four years; and improved the university’s visibility and standing within Georgia and nationally.

Dr. Papp’s other successes at Kennesaw State include accelerating the expansion of KSU’s facilities including new residence halls, classroom buildings, laboratories, performing arts centers, and parking garages; initiating the purchase of 88 acres of land for a university sports and recreation complex; expanding the university’s research efforts; initiating on-line degree programs; expanding the university’s experiential education efforts; emphasizing customer service initiatives; initiating programs to enhance Kennesaw State’s retention, progression, and graduation rates; and overseeing KSU’s successful transition to NCAA Division I athletics.
Prior to becoming KSU’s President, Dr. Papp from 2000 to 2006 was Senior Vice Chancellor for Academics and Fiscal Affairs of the University System of Georgia (USG). In this capacity, he was responsible for system-wide academic, faculty, and student issues and concerns; system-wide business and financial affairs; academic and business information technology programs and systems; and system-wide strategic planning for the 34 colleges and universities of the 250,000 student USG. Projects he initiated included implementing higher admissions standards, assuring that higher standards had a minimal impact on diversity, overseeing the writing of the 2002-07 USG Strategic Plan, briefing the Board of Regents on issues of critical importance to the USG, hiring senior administrative personnel in the System Office and on the System’s campus, and working with the Georgia General Assembly and Governor’s Office.

Before this, Papp was Director of Educational Programs (1999-2000) for the Georgia Electronic Design Project, Georgia’s academic/industry/government initiative to become a global leader in broadband technology. As Director, he developed and implemented the strategic plan for the educational programs of this $100 million effort, which led to hiring over 70 faculty members at seven USG institutions in computing, broadband communications, and digital signal processing.

Dr. Papp joined the Tech faculty in 1973 as Assistant Professor of International Affairs. While at Tech, he was also Visiting Professor at the Western Australia Institute of Technology (1977); Research Professor at the Strategic Studies Institute of the U.S. Army War College (1977-78); Senior Research Professor at the Center for Aerospace Doctrine, Research, and Education of the U.S. Air War College (1983-84); and Visiting Professor at Fudan University in Shanghai (1984). Dr. Papp’s awards while at Georgia Tech included selection by the Student Government Association as “Outstanding Faculty Member” (1976) and selection by the Institute Honors Committee as Tech’s "Distinguished Professor" (1993), the first time the award was bestowed on someone other than an engineer or a physical scientist. Papp was also a finalist in the White House Fellows Competition (1979) and a two-time recipient of the U.S. Department of the Army’s “Outstanding Civilian Service” medal (1979 and 2004).

Dr. Papp’s academic specialties are international security policy, U.S. and Russian foreign and defense policies, international system change, and the impact of information and communication technologies on the international system. He is a past captain of the Miami, Atlanta and Georgia Tech rugby football clubs. He has also been a participant in several Friendship Force home-stay programs in Russia. (January 2015)

David Kehler has served as Director of Bands and Associate Professor of Music at Kennesaw State University since 2009, where he oversees all aspects of the University’s band program while serving as Music Director and Conductor of the KSU Wind Ensemble. During his short tenure, the KSU Wind Ensemble has been featured several times on 90.1 FM (WABE-Atlanta public radio), and has garnered praise from composers including Steven Bryant, Jennifer Higdon, Karel Husa, David Maslanka, Scott McAllister and Joel Puckett. Under professor Kehler’s guidance, the KSU Wind Ensemble continues to lead in composer consortiums, which have included the creation of new works by Steven Bryant, Michael Markowski, Joel Puckett, James Stephenson, Christopher Theofanidis, and an upcoming commission by Pulitzer Prize winner, Joseph Schwantner. In addition, the GDYO Wind Symphony participated in exchange concerts with the University of North Texas, The Atlanta Youth Wind Symphony and performed with Jeff Nelson, former horn of the Canadian Brass. In the summer of 2008, the GDYO Wind Symphony embarked on an extensive two-week tour of China, performing at the music conservatories of Shanghai, Xian, Beijing, and Hong Kong.
