

October 2009

Georgia Library News now on Twitter

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/glq>

 Part of the Communication Technology and New Media Commons, and the Library and Information Science Commons

Recommended Citation

(2009) "Georgia Library News now on Twitter," Georgia Library Quarterly: Vol. 46 : Iss. 4 , Article 12.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/glq/vol46/iss4/12>

This News is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@Kennesaw State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Georgia Library Quarterly by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@Kennesaw State University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@kennesaw.edu.

librarians within the profession. The scholarship combines financial support with leadership development.

Yontz-Orlando's activities in Chicago included attending the Spectrum Leadership Institute, an intensive three-day preconference designed specifically for the scholars.

Throughout their scholarship year and beyond, the Spectrum Scholars are provided with opportunities to network with other scholarship recipients and library leaders via electronic discussion lists and other professional development tools.

Yontz-Orlando, who is bilingual and has a background in business, is interested in library management and in outreach to Spanish-speaking patrons. ►►

Yontz-Orlando

Bush grant will fund 45 scholarships

The Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) has awarded Georgia Public Library Service a 2009 Laura Bush 21st Century Librarian Program grant for $680,327. According to Lyn Hopper, assistant state librarian for library development, the money will be used to fund the GPLS "Librarians Build Communities" program, which will provide the scholarships needed to prepare 45 students to be public librarians and provide them with expertise in community building.

"This grant will help GPLS strengthen community support for public libraries in Georgia, address Georgia's shortage of librarians and provide a model for other states," Hopper said.

She explained that GPLS will collaborate with the Valdosta State University (VSU) Master of Library and Information Science (MLIS) program. Each qualifying student will receive a full in-state tuition scholarship to the program, which requires 39 semester hours for graduation.

The first students are expected to enter the program in the fall 2010 semester and complete their course work within the three-year grant period. Subsequent groups will begin studies in spring and fall semesters of 2011. Students will be required to maintain a minimum 3.0 grade point average in order to receive continued funding.

VSU is prepared to offer curriculum content to meet the program's instructional needs by recruiting part-time faculty with expertise in public libraries and community building. GPLS will assist the effort by offering an advanced public library seminar with a focus on community building during years two and three of the grant period. "GPLS will also compile pre- and post-assessment information geared toward measuring changes in community-building attitudes, knowledge and skills as a result of the program," Hopper said.

Applications will be reviewed and participants selected by a committee that will include representatives from GPLS, VSU and the Georgia public library community. Students will be selected based on potential for successful graduate study, interest in public library community building, and commitment to work in a Georgia public library for at least three years following graduation.

The total project budget is $844,647, with $164,320 in matching funds coming from GPLS and VSU. Approximately 77 percent of the grant funds will be for direct student support.

Since its inception in 2002, the IMLS Laura Bush 21st Century Librarian Program has funded the education and training of 3,220 master's students; 186 doctoral students; 1,256 preprofessionals; and 26,206 continuing education students across the country.

The program also supports grants for research related to library education and library staffing needs, curriculum development and continuing education and training. ►►

Georgia library news now on Twitter

GPLS now has a Twitter account, Georgialibs, that will give Internet users a new way to keep up with library events and news. The short, 140-character "tweets" from Georgialibs are readable by all devices — such as personal computers, mobile phones and personal digital assistants — that have Internet connections.

"The GPLS Twitter feed will be a useful communications tool for getting brief reminders about upcoming library events, conferences and workshops and also for linking to online public library news items from across the state," said Darin Givens, webmaster for GPLS. "Anyone with a Twitter account can follow Georgialibs and receive updates."

To get the latest news about public libraries in the state, visit www.twitter.com and enter "Georgialibs" in the search field. Georgialibs can also be followed on the GPLS news page at www.georgialibraries.org/news. ►►