Joseph Turrin - Concert Piece No. 1

“Written for and commissioned by Jason Ham, Principal Euphonium with the US Military Academy Band at West Point (USA). I wanted to write something technically challenging yet had sections of expressiveness. Since the euphonium is such a versatile instrument in regard to both technique and expressiveness, I found myself writing this piece rather quickly. I will admit that while composing the piece, I thought of the composer Bartok. Not only because I have always been attracted to his music but for the fact that Jason Ham was to premiere the work in Hungary. So I must admit to this bit of influence throughout. Concert Piece No. 1 is also a work where both instruments (euphonium and piano) each share an equal part.” - Joseph Turrin, Nov. 2010.

Julius Klengel - Concertino No. 1 in Bb Major

Julius Klengel, a German cellist known for his educational etudes, composed this Concertino early in his life. While the majority of his compositions for cello are rarely remembered, this piece stands out for its value to developing cellists as a wonderful, brief introduction to concerto form.

Ito Yasuhide - Fantasy Variations

Fantasy Variations was commissioned and premiered by Toru Miura, internationally acclaimed euphonium player, and a member of the Tokyo Kosei Wind Orchestra. The piece is based on a “Yaisamanina (love song) from Ainu Folk-music” which appears as the “Theme” in the piece. “Ainu” is the Japanese Aborigine from Northern Japan.

Vladimir Cosma - Euphonium Concerto

Vladimir Cosma is a Romanian-born violinist and composer living in France who studied composition under Nadia Boulanger in 1963. A prolific film score composer, he has received numerous awards for his nearly three hundred compositions. Cosma’s penchant for theatrics is ever present in this three-movement tour de force, leading it to become one of the most popular and most challenging works in the euphonium repertoire. The piece is based on the Phrygian Dominant Scale, also known as the Spanish “Gypsy” Scale, which is commonly used in flamenco music. This gives the work a sense of dramatic Spanish flair, especially in the final movement. The last few sections feature extremely demanding violin-like passages for the soloist embedded in an orchestral texture that steadily builds to an electrifying finish.

Michael Terry is a senior Music Education Major at Kennesaw State University where he studies euphonium with Bernard Flythe. Michael performs with the KSU Wind Ensemble under the direction of Dr. David Kehler and the KSU Trombone Ensemble under the direction of Dr. Tom Gibson. At KSU, Michael was recently announced a winner of the Concerto Competition and the Composition Contest (for his composition for Wind Ensemble titled Haiku). As an arranger/composer, Michael has written for high school marching bands across the country and in China, as well as college chamber ensembles. Previous to his time at KSU, Michael was the principal euphonium of the Columbus State University Wind Ensemble under the direction of Dr. Robert Rumbelow and played with the CSU Trombone Choir and Octet under the direction of Dr. Brad Palmer. Michael studied euphonium with Professor Andrew Miller during his time at CSU. Outside of college life, Michael performed as a member of the Cadets Drum and Bugle Corps, based in Allentown, PA, from 2000-2007. Since 2010, Michael has been a member of the brass faculty for the Troopers Drum and Bugle Corps, based in Casper, WY, most recently serving as Assistant Brass Caption Head. Michael is also a member of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia.
