Dhammapada Verses

I.
The traveler has reached the end of the journey! In the freedom of the Infinite he is free from all sorrows, the fetters that bound him are thrown away, and the burning fever of life is no more.

Those who have high thoughts are ever striving: they are not happy to remain in the same place. Like swans that leave their lake and rise into the air, they leave their home for a higher home.

How can there be laughter, how can there be pleasure, when the whole world is burning? When you are in deep darkness, will you not ask for a lamp?

II.
Dull repetition is the rust of sacred verses; lack of repair is the rust of houses; want of healthy exercise is the rust of beauty; unwatchfulness is the rust of the watcher.

There is no fire like lust, and no chains like those of hate. There is no net like illusion, and no rushing torrent like desire.

Yellow leaves hang on your tree of life. The messengers of death are waiting. You are going to travel far away. Have you any provision for the journey?

Program Notes
by the composers

Four Short Pieces
Four Short Pieces was written while I was a graduate student at the University of Illinois. My goal was to explore various possibilities of writing for the solo violin, and at the same time create movements that were brief yet musically coherent. Each movement has a different character. The first is marked “Molto espressivo”, and the second “Dramatically”. The third movement features various sound qualities achieved by plucking the strings, and is marked “Resonant and projected, but still with delicacy and finesse”. The final movement starts with quiet yet intense motion, and builds to a final burst of energy.

Chakras of an Automaton: Duet for Percussion and DJ
With current technology exploring artificial intelligence, there is no reason why we should not consider the possibility of self-awareness and ultimately spirituality for the modern robot. With newfound identity, androids may be compelled to not only explore current human belief systems, but to build and expand on these systems to incorporate their own existence.

“Chakras of an Automaton” explores the path of a robot from self-awareness to ascension by climbing up the seven chakras as realized in android terminology. Just as a robot would not pause through this process, so are the movements connected with no pause between each.

The percussionist uses minimal equipment, all of which is portable. The DJ not only uses turntables in a traditional sense, but also utilizes different media on the turntable to create new and unexpected sounds.

Dhammapada Verses
The Dhammapada is an ancient and significant text in the Buddhist tradition. The title can be translated as "The Path of Righteousness", "The Path of Virtue", or "The Path of Perfection", among other possibilities. While the proverbs and aphorisms in The Dhammapada cannot be definitively traced back to Buddha, they are thought to summarize the essence of his teachings.

I was drawn to six particular verses by the universality of their message and the poetry of their imagery. The six verses are given in two large sections of three verses each, arranged so that each section ends with a question. Between these is a central section that features a soprano solo vocalise. Both the central section and the music that ends the work are musical reflections on the text questions they follow.

Extreme City
In the early summer of 2008, I spent some time in Fairbanks, Alaska, and a few months later I returned to live in Atlanta after two years in a relatively isolated town in Northwest Ohio. These two events were frequently on my mind during this time when I wrote Extreme City. While working on this piece, I began to imagine a giant, sprawling metropolis, such as Atlanta, and picturing it located in an Arctic climate, complete with a nearby volcano and wild animals roaming the streets. The music does not follow a specific narrative; I was just trying to capture the intensity and violence that daily life in these circumstances would render. The slower, middle section is a fantasy on a Romanian gypsy melody. Extreme City is dedicated to Caleb Herron and Ellery Trafford, with gratitude for their enduring friendship and endless support of my efforts.

Duo Concertante
The Duo Concertante was begun while I was in residence at the MacDowell Colony in Peterborough, New Hampshire in 2002. While there, I was particularly impressed by certain works of the poets in residence—poems in which word usage and ordering were playfully virtuosic, like a jazz musician tossing off riffs, yet beneath whose light-hearted surfaces could lay rich and substantial content. Although not consciously seeking to emulate this approach, I observed later that it had proven quite influential, especially in the outer movements of the Duo Concertante. An observant listener may hear other influences as well, most noticeably the rapid imitative exchanges between flute and percussion like those found in Indian classical music and in jazz.

The Duo Concertante is a work for paired soloists that requires both virtuosity and highly refined control of expressively inflected pitch and timbral shadings. The pitch and timbral nuances are most apparent in the second movement and in the third movement cadenzas for both instruments. The percussionist’s cadenza features the guiro, a scraped gourd that is usually given only a single sound in the Western classical music repertory. I experimented with extending the guiro’s pitch and timbral capabilities and created a nine-note scale and a variety of articulations that can be heard in the third movement, most especially in the virtuosic guiro passages in the cadenza.

A significant influence emerged from the exceptional performance capabilities of flutist Christina Guenther. She commissioned and premiered the Duo Concertante in conjunction with her Florida State University doctoral treatise “Laurence Sherr: Chamber Music for Flute”. We consulted on numerous occasions during the work’s creation, and our collaboration included one buoyant session where a substantial part of the flute cadenza was completed in an energetic cycle of conception, sketching, performance, and revision. The Duo Concertante is dedicated to her.
