IT'S FOR KS you!

Why Give to the Horace W. Sturgis Library?

The Horace W. Sturgis Library is the intellectual center that supports Kennesaw State University's commitment to providing effective teaching and learning, research and scholarship, and creative activity. In addition, members of the general public visit the library to improve their knowledge and advance a myriad of individual goals. As one of the most heavily used services on campus, the library is a vital component of the Kennesaw State University community.

An excellent library attracts a great faculty and challenges students to commit themselves fully to their intellectual development while giving them the tools to succeed in their studies.

Monetary donations are used to purchase library materials in all formats, to refurbish library spaces in ways that enhance student learning, and to provide new technologies that provide innovative learning opportunities for our students.

Why now?

Kennesaw State University has been growing with increasing enrollment and addition of more programs of study. The Horace W. Sturgis Library is evolving along with advances in information and technology. One thing has not changed, however: high quality content—whether in print or electronic format—comes at a price, one that is continually increasing.

Now, more than ever, access to knowledge is the key to competitiveness. Our students require a first-class education if they are to compete for a place in this new knowledge economy. They need an excellent academic library with the resources to help them learn, succeed, and compete.

Why me? (What's in it for me?)

An investment in the Horace W. Sturgis Library helps build the future of Kennesaw State University. Our donors recognize the link between an excellent library and high quality education. Your contribution will fulfill your interest in learning and share the excitement of discovery with the next generation.

The library's naming opportunities and adopt-a-book program make it possible for financial contributions to pay lasting tribute to a significant person in your life, such as a family member, an honored colleague or special friend.

Let's keep Horace W. Sturgis Library the creative and dynamic intellectual center we can all be proud of.
