December 2007

REVIEW: Gourd Girls

Teresa Pacheco
Northeast Georgia Health System

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/glq

Part of the Women's Studies Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://digitalcommons.kennesaw.edu/glq/vol44/iss3/20
The Georgia Library Quarterly reviews books on aspects of life in Georgia and the South, including history, literature, politics, education and genealogy. Materials written by Southern authors or published by regional publishers may also be considered, as well as those on libraries and librarianship.

Sarah McGhee, Off the Shelf Co-editor, Chestatee Regional Library System, smcghee@chestateelibrary.org
Teresa Pacheco, Off the Shelf Co-editor, Northeast Georgia Health System, tere711@comcast.net
See more Off the Shelf reviews at http://gla.georgialibraries.org/glq_bookreviews.htm

NON-FICTION

Venison is personally evocative of my childhood in the woods of northern Michigan. To this day, the school district there counts the first day of deer-hunting season as a holiday. The phalanx of hunters who ascended to our sleepy town (“flat-landers,” we called them) were an unwelcome disruption who could be counted on to leave a perfectly good venison rotting in a field — missing only the antlers, which undoubtedly hung in some Grosse Point game room. With this work, Gary Grossman manages to align with the sportsmen and women who hunt for the table, not the wall. The recipes are straightforward with clear, concise directions, arranged in seven chapters by type (soup, stews, roasts, etc.). The table of contents has acknowledgements as well as preparation/preservation notes. Middle-Eastern venison meatloaf, venison fried rice, and Mexican venison stew are just a sampling of the continental culinary options; more advanced cooks may want to attempt the venison in red mole with its 20-ingredient sauce. Reference to a butchering pamphlet is helpfully provided, but the author mysteriously neglects to name resources for procuring butchered venison ready to cook. Shopping for unusual meats can be daunting; guidance and suggestion would be helpful. In A Bone to Pick, Grossman aptly combines the 21st century denizen’s taste for the exotic with the 19th century poacher’s palate. Additionally, the charming illustrations and textual colloquialisms (i.e. “Serves: a bunch of folks”) combine to evoke nothing so much as the 1970’s country idyll typified by the success of both Grizzly Adams and Jimmy Carter. The volume is coated, conveniently spiral bound, includes space for personal notes at the end of each recipe, and is suitable for public libraries, culinary schools and private collections alike.
— Reviewed by Jewell Anderson
Armstrong Atlantic State University

Gourd Girls is Priscilla Wilson’s richly told memoir of her 30-year business and personal partnership with Janice Lymburner. It is the story of two girls barely out of college who, through good karma and the kindness of others, wind up creating a life that allows them to live simply, artistically and on their own terms. Short on money but full of love for each other and their desire to live and work together, Priscilla sets out to revive an old art, gourd carving, while Janice continues to teach and bring in a small but steady income. Priscilla’s account of the trials and errors involved in gourd farming and collecting is at once hilarious and poignant. As the women battle bad soil, unfamiliar machinery and a lack of knowledge about farming in general, the Mount...

Botanists estimate that the largest redwoods are more than 2,000 years old, but dating by annual growth rings is not possible, because the oldest redwoods are hollow. The tallest are between 350 to 380 feet high, 35 to 38 stories. Until the 1980s, when humans first began exploring the giant redwoods, it was assumed that life was sparse in the canopy of the redwood forest. In fact, the trees’ first explorers found whole ecosystems of life, including the expected lichens, ferns and insects, but also voles, salamanders, huckleberries and even other trees, such as laurel and hemlock. In Wild Trees, the story of the exploration of individual trees as if they were mountains or countries is told as Preston follows the botanists and naturalists who climb the largest and tallest organisms in the world. The personal stories of the tree-climbing scientists who search for the tallest trees are interspersed with the history of the redwood forest, the ecology of the forest floor and the canopies of the trees, and the techniques and gear of climbing as a sport. To research this book, Preston learned how to climb giant trees himself and even camped out in them. While the sometimes forced re-enactments of the climbing expeditions become repetitious, the account of the lost world of the tree-top environment is compelling and showcases Preston’s ability to draw wonder and drama from the science of his topic.

— Reviewed by Karen Minton
GALILEO Support Services, Library Services

FICTION

A ride with Ferroll Sams Down Town is a trip unlike any you can imagine. This tale is told through the eyes of lifelong resident James Aloysius “Buster” Holcombe Jr. It is a humorous and poignant tapestry of narratives set in a small Georgia town. Sams uses a full arsenal of wit, wisdom and plain old Southern charm to engage his readers in the lives of an unforgettable set of characters.