Sonata in E minor | Johann Sebastian Bach

J. S. Bach wrote his Sonata in E minor around 1724, shortly after he made his move to Leipzig. The piece is written in four movements alternating between slow and fast tempos. The first and third slow movements evoke a feeling of sadness, while the fast second and fourth movements provide light and energy. The fast second and fourth movements show off the virtuosic technique of the soloist, featuring one passage in the second movement that has over 100 consecutive sixteenth-notes without a break. The fourth movement ends with a more triumphant feeling; but still, Bach makes musical references to past movements, binding the piece together beautifully.

Nocturne et Allegro Scherzando | Philippe Gaubert

Philippe Gaubert was a French composer and flutist. Many flutists are very familiar with the name Gaubert alongside his teacher, Paul Taffanel, as these two men were prominent professors at the Paris Conservatory. Nocturne et Allegro Scherzando was published in 1906. The piece begins with a beautiful melody after a short piano introduction in the low register of the flute. The Nocturne is filled with lush lyrical passages, showing off the color and tone capabilities of the soloist. The second half is heavily rhythmic and animated. Nearing the end of the piece, there is a beautiful, final return of the lyrical first theme, carrying the piece to an exciting finale.

Sonata in D Major | Sergei Prokofiev

Sergei Prokofiev completed his Sonata for flute in 1943. This sonata is in four movements; the first movement is lyrical, the second is fast and rhythmic, the third is a lyrical andante featuring the lower register of the flute, and the final fourth movement is a playful mixture of all three previous movements. Prokofiev utilizes many techniques and styles in this piece to evoke a feeling of Russian nationalism. This piece is an extremely standard piece in the flute repertoire, and flutists are proud to have such a wonderful sonata that was written first for flute, as opposed to being transposed from another instruments repertoire.
